LETTER FROM THE MAYOR

Welcome!

to the 38th Ann Arbor Art Fair!

In 1960, a small group of artists and teachers strung wires between the parking meters on South University to open the first Ann Arbor Art Fair. Soon recognized as the finest exhibition of its kind in Michigan, the fair has continued to gain prominence ever since. The Ann Arbor Art Fair has been consistently ranked by Sunshine Artist magazine as among the top in the country.

More than 1,000 artists from forty-five states exhibit at the fair. Whether you're looking for a stunning painting, elegant, one-of-a-kind jewelry, or a handcrafted wooden toy for a child's birthday, you can count on finding it at the Ann Arbor Art Fair.

Since the fair attracts more than 500,000 visitors every year, the city government is committed to helping everyone move easily and safely through the fair. Please respect the "No Parking" zones, many of which are required for emergency access. And you can avoid the hassle of parking entirely by taking the speedy and reliable Ann Arbor Transportation Authority shuttle buses.

The arts are a vital part of Ann Arbor's economy. A recent study found that nonprofit arts groups alone spend $21 million a year here, and estimates of the Art Fair's indirect economic impact ran as high as $50 million. But the arts' most important contribution is to enrich our own lives. Artists show us new ways of looking at our world. Their presence here every summer helps to make Ann Arbor one of Michigan's most vital and lively cities.

We look forward to welcoming you back throughout the year to sample all that Ann Arbor has to offer in music, theater, dance, the visual and performing arts, and more. For additional information, call the Ann Arbor Convention and Visitors Bureau at (313) 995-7281.

Please enjoy your visit to Ann Arbor. We hope to see you again soon!

Sincerely,

Ingrid B. Sheldon
Mayor

Days of the Fair

The fair attracts a slightly different type of buyer each day.

"Wednesday morning, there's a mad rush of early shoppers who are afraid that they won't get the newest and the best and the largest and the nicest," says Jim Ardis, a potter and metalworker from Midland. "They come in droves. They're my favorite, of course. They know—and they're right—that after a day or two, you're pretty much sold out of your best stuff."

Thursday is a pleasant, quiet valley between the peaks of Wednesday and the weekend. "I tell people to come on Thursday—and better early than late," says William Tacke, a painter from New Ulm, Minnesota, and a twenty-five-year fair veteran.

That advice holds true for Friday and Saturday mornings, too, says Susan Froelich, director of the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair. She recommends the first two hours of Thursday, Friday, and Saturday for the crowd-phobic.

According to Shary Brown, director of the Summer Art Fair, "The crowds pick up and the evening becomes quite festive" on Friday. "If it's good weather, the parties come out," says Kathy Krick of the State Street Area Art Fair. "They're looking for the music, the food—and the people-watching is good Friday."

Saturday's reviews are as mixed as the masses that mob it. "Some people have a better day on Saturday [than Wednesday]," says Carol Roggow, a weaver from Mio, Michigan, who has shown her work in every Summer Art Fair since the first, in 1970. "I never do because my stock is always down."

According to Froelich, Saturday is

"just jammed if the weather is halfway decent, but it tends to be more of a lookers' day, where people are out browsing and people-watching." But for the artists in the State Street fair, says Krick, "Saturday is the biggest sales day, even though it's a short day. People have walked the whole show and then made their decision. If they're new, a lot of [artists] worry after they've been here three days and haven't made that many sales. Then you see them on Saturday, and they don't have time to talk."

John Long, whose drawings have been in all three fairs, would like to see the fairs extended through Sunday. "That's usually my best day at other shows," he says.

When most of us think of hell, we probably think of fire. But when Ann Arbor firefighters think of hell, they think Art Fair. "I hate it, pretty much," confesses city fire marshal Scott Rayburn. "I don't care if they ever have the Art Fair here again." To him, the fair is a major source of anxiety because booths cut off quick access to billions of dollars worth of structures.

All streets have fourteen-foot-wide fire lanes, where no one can place a booth, porta-john, or any other structure. But the fire lanes are often filled with crowds. "We can usually get there faster on foot," Rayburn says.

Keeping fire hydrants out in the open is another problem. "Space is in great demand at the Art Fair," explains fire department inspector Sandy Stewart. She once found a fire hydrant under a table with a black cloth over it.

In the fairs' nearly forty-year history, all of the fires have been small and quickly extinguished, usually occurring in food booths. Rayburn attributes the lack of major problems to preventive rules, such as mandatory fire-retardant tents and tarps, and a ban on open flames (no fire juggling allowed). Stewart says firefighters try to be as cooperative as possible, but she emphasizes the potential for disaster in a large crowd. "Putting out a fire would be difficult, but the greatest life safety issue is the stampede effect."

On the other hand, the Art Fair presents few worries for the Ann Arbor Police Department. It means sought-after overtime for officers, says sergeant Chris Heatley. "It's enjoyable," he says. "You're on foot, and the problems are few."

the Art Fair brings to town, and how little crime," she says.

With so many valuables spread out for all to see, one might expect theft to be a problem. But according to sergeant Larry Jerue, "Vendors have a pretty good handle on keeping an eye on their wares. There are also enough people around to grab you if you try to run away. The crowd acts more as a deterrent than an opportunity."

According to Heatley, unauthorized vendors cause the greatest headaches for fair cops. Peddlers must have their permits displayed, and police have maps that show who's supposed to be where. In most cases, unauthorized street vendors are allowed to pack up their things and leave. However, they could be charged with a misdemeanor and face a fine of up to $500 and/or up to ninety days in jail.

Ceo sees these and most other fair problems as nuisances, not serious breaches of the peace. Once, she says, "a guy was walking around with a snake wrapped around his neck. I thought, 'Who's going to approach him? Not me!'" Another time she did approach someone clad in only a loincloth. "We got him a pair of boxers," she says.

Beating the Heat

When thousands of people crowd together on a blazing, muggy Michigan afternoon, someone's bound to get too darn hot.

"Heat-related emergencies are the only serious problems we've seen," says Jennifer Belcher, a supervisor for the Red Cross trailer at the Street Art Fair. People get dehydrated and run out of energy because they forget to eat and drink, she says.

Some years, people have been taken to the hospital. Getting an ambulance through a solid wall of people is no easy task. "You use serious crowd control," explains Belcher. "But in the past some people have had to be carried through the crowds to the ambulance."

No one has ever died at the fair. According to three-time Red Cross volunteer, Scott Hale, there have been "potential cardiac problems"—exhausted people who have sat in the trailer for several hours to rest and sometimes even to sleep for a while.

By keeping fairgoers on South University hydrated, the first aid/CPR-certified supervisors and volunteers prevent emergencies more often than they treat them. Last year they distributed water and cookies donated by the Girl Scouts to more than 5,000 people. "The cookies were a huge hit last year," says Belcher.

The trailer has no water source, so the Red Cross hooks up a hose to a spigot outside the First of America Bank at the corner of South University and East University. Volunteers, using five-gallon drums, lug water back to the trailer all day long. "It's a pretty laborious task," says Hale.

They also offer first aid for pets. Belcher says the treatment for overheated dogs is a water-filled cooler—"The dogs climb right in."

Canines and humans can also find water at the Ann Arbor Emergency Radio Team's trailer, not far from the Red Cross trailer at East University and South University. The radio team alerts artists about impending storms and helps lost children and parents find one another. According to volunteer Connie Opal, three to ten children get lost every year. It's more common for adults to lose other adults, but, Opal says, "We only look for kids. Adults can find each other."

Whether you're young, old, or a dog, use common sense at the fair, Belcher advices. "Drink plenty of fluids, and eat on a regular basis. Stay out of the sun, use sunblock, and know where the first aid station is." Besides the trailers at East University and South University, there is also a first aid station run by the fire department at the corner of Liberty and Division. But the 4,000 Girl Scout cookies donated this year will only be passed out at the Red Cross trailer.

Faces in the Crowd

The prototypical fairgoer is a well-educated Michigan woman in her thirties or forties.

Every year, 500,000 people descend on this fair city, but the most you may learn about them is what their T-shirts say, or what it feels like when their heels accidentally crunch down on your big toe. So last year the three art fairs got together with the Ann Arbor Area Convention and Visitors Bureau to find out who attends the Ann Arbor Art Fairs. They commissioned Davidson-Peterson Associates, Inc., from York, Maine, to survey the crowd during the fair. This is what they learned:

- Most of the crowd came from Michigan: 78 percent, with 15 percent from Ann Arbor itself and 34 percent from the Detroit area. Ohio was well-represented with 6 percent, and Indiana, Illinois, and Canada provided 3 percent each. Folks from elsewhere in the United States comprised 6 percent of the masses.

- Half of those surveyed were in their thirties or forties, 18 percent were in their twenties, and 26 percent were in their fifties or sixties. (Only fairgoers age eighteen and older were included in the survey.)

- Seventy-one percent of the respondents were women, and 26 percent were men (the other 3 percent were apparently hermaphroditic slugs).

- People were generally well-educated and far from the poverty line. Sixty-one percent had college degrees, and the median annual household income was $61,700.

- City residents spent the least, an average of $37 per day, followed by day-trippers at $50 per day. People staying overnight in hotels were not well-represented in the survey, but they apparently spent about $100 a day, including lodging.

- The greatest percentage of fairgoers' spending went to shopping, then food and drink. More than twice as much money was spent on festival grounds than at local businesses.

- How many Ann Arborites actually venture downtown? A telephone survey concluded that in 1996, 62 percent of Ann Arbor households sent at least one person to the fair.

Arts Endowment

The Michigan Guild is holding its own artists' benefit sale.

The Guild has asked its 1,400 members

Sales of art work donated by Donna Beaubien and 350 other members helped the Michigan Guild raise over $5,000 toward its arts endowment last year.

around the country to donate pieces of art to be sold at the Summer Art Fair and other events. The money raised goes to an endowment fund, administered by the Ann Arbor Community Foundation, which supports local projects in the visual arts.

"We've had a terrific response from artists," says Summer Art Fair director Shary Brown. "They have a real attachment to Ann Arbor." Last year, donated pieces ranged all the way from $5 rings to a $1,000 wall piece. "Of around five hundred and forty exhibitors, we received donations from over three hundred and fifty, which is incredible," says Donna Beaubien, a member of the Guild's board of directors.

Ken Pellar, a Sterling Heights artist in mixed media and furniture, donated a mirror and laminated board worth $750. "It's a lot easier for artists to donate a work of art than money," he says. "Money in hand is hard to let go of."

Local jeweler Sharon Donovan donated a pin worth $95 and earrings worth $55. "This is about bringing art back to people who are where I was," she says. "I could have used help ten years ago." Donovan has donated art to other causes, but never to one specifically designed to help other artists. "It's important to support the arts in any way possible," she says.

Last year's sales raised over $5,000, says Guild executive director Kaye Sirotti, and the group hopes to do even better this year. Grants will begin once the endowment reaches $25,000. The donated pieces are sold at the Guild's booth at the corner of Main and Liberty, right next to the T-shirt booth.

Art on the Web

The Ann Arbor Art Fair is being promoted on the Internet—and a new World Wide Web site aims to pave the way for an on-line art fair.

Chris Maher is bullish on the prospects for selling art on the Web. In fact, says the Lambertville-based photographer, "I got a five-hundred-dollar order last week off the Internet."

But when Maher, who appears annually in the Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair, surveyed more than 100 artists at a fair in Maryland, he found an alarming lack of sophistication among his peers about the new medium. While fifteen artists had work for sale on the Web, only three knew its location well enough to point a potential customer there.

www.artfair.org

In an effort to bring artists closer to Web-savvy consumers, the three fairs are backing an art-sales site at <http://www.artfair.org>.

"The premise of it is to offer artists a site not only to publicize their work, but to sell their work," said Susan Froelich. "We're hoping the site will be a really helpful way for the audience to find artists they remember from the fair."

Artists can be located by their media, their location at the fairs, or their hometowns, making it easy for customers to backtrack from the crush of images they see during Art Fair. And with secured commerce sites becoming more expensive and complex, Web developer Hicham Tout says the initial $75 annual fee for artists to join the site will prove a bargain. In addition, the site will charge a 15 percent commission for works sold through the site, far less than typical gallery commissions.

The Ann Arbor Area Convention and Visitors Bureau will update its site, <http://www.annarbor.org>, with parking, transportation, and other necessary information, along with an on-line camera scanning the action at the fairs.

While scanning images of artworks onto the Web is common, Maher and Art Fair organizers say a comprehensive, event-based site will be unique in the world of on-line commerce.

"Getting on-line is not the critical part," according to Maher. "Learning how to interact in the new environment is the key. The Web, when properly used, is an extension of the kind of one-on-one communication between artists and customers that takes place at art fairs and in studios."

While the site will not be fully operational in time for this year's Ann Arbor Art Fair, organizers hope to build a body of work from artists who appear here, and to bolster it by drawing registrations from other fairs. Ideally, Maher said, the fairs' élan and the city's computer-friendly reputation can combine to give the site a fast start.

Lost in A²

Where's Zingerman's? Where's the bathroom? Where's my car?

Volunteers at the Art Fair information booths answer all sorts of questions—from the routine to the seemingly impossible. "We get questions like, 'Do you know someone who works in wood? He makes mailboxes,'" says Cheryl Brooks, one of more than 250 volunteers at the three fairs. "We'll ask, 'Do you know his name?' 'No.' 'Do you know where he's from?' 'No.'"

No matter how vague, if the querier is patient, volunteers say they can almost always find an answer. "Someone might say, 'Last year I bought this piece, and I don't know where they are this year,'" says Sue Enis, who has volunteered for fourteen years. According to Enis, it helps if she has a chance to walk the fair before working the booth.

Bobbi Gildersleeve rarely gets to view the fair before working long shifts at the corner of Liberty and Division in the information booth run by the Boy Scouts. "People ask, 'Have you seen the birdhouses with license plates on top?'" she says. "Most of us don't get out of the booth. The only thing we've seen is people."

Sixteen-year-old Noah Pearson also works at the Boy Scout booth. One of his favorite obscure questions is when people ask him, "Where's the place with the wooden floors that sells ice cream?" He knows they mean Lovin' Spoonful.

When people ask Char Hanson, a retired Washtenaw Community College instructor, to recommend a place to eat, she always directs them to Mr. Rib's booth for the "Soul on a Roll." If they ask where the bathrooms are, she says, "I try to direct them away from porta-johns and into nice air-conditioned buildings."

And Enis and Gildersleeve say people really do ask fair volunteers to help them find their cars. A lot of out-of-towners get turned around and come to the booths flustered. Again, once the booth attendants gain enough information, they can usually help reorient the person.

What should people study ahead of time? Besides maps, Hanson wishes people would pay closer attention to the fair's schedule. "On Saturday afternoon, people come up with a list of artists they want to see. I tell them where to find them and then say, 'You have forty-five minutes.' They say, 'You mean it's not open tonight? It's not open tomorrow?'" The fair closes at 9 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, and at 5 p.m. on Saturday.

Hot Item

"It wasn't my idea to make a garden sculpture," says metal sculptor

Fairgoers have been snapping up Steve Anderson's nature-themed garden sculptures since 1994.

Steve Anderson of Cedar Springs, Michigan. "The customers told me what to do."

Anderson's copper and brass butterflies, hummingbirds, and frogs mounted on metal poles were the "must-have" item at the 1996 Ann Arbor Art Fair. But the phenomenon started as a fluke.

A metal sculptor since his 1975 graduation from Grand Valley State University, Anderson started making praying mantises on eighteen-inch-long stems in the early 1980s. They were designed for use indoors, in vases. But in 1994, he ran out of time while preparing for the Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair and had 100 hummingbirds on three-foot welding rods that hadn't yet been cut to size. So he brought them to Ann Arbor, and when he arrived, he told his son to bring them from their van to his booth so he could cut them. "He didn't make it back to the booth," recalls Anderson. "They were surrounding him."

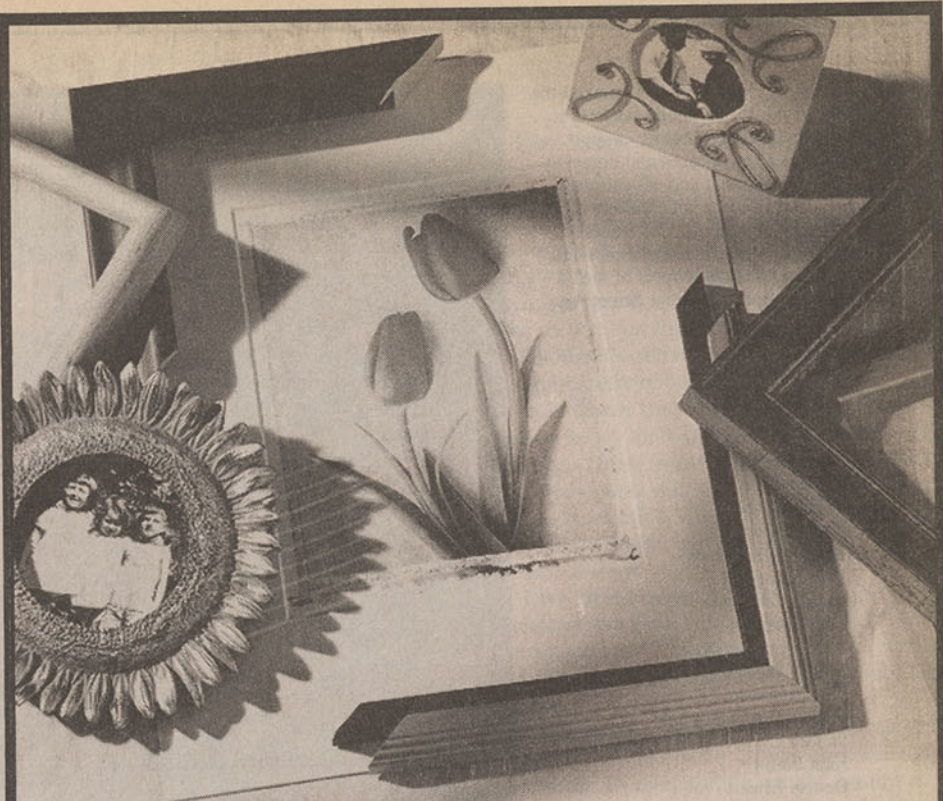

Anderson brought more long-stemmed hummingbirds to the 1995 fairs, and sold out. For 1996, he added butterflies, frogs, and other creatures. The light, airy creatures proved so popular that lines of customers stretched away from his booth throughout the four-day event.

Most of Anderson's sculptures range in price from $15 to $50—although large pieces such as three-to-four-foot-long dragonflies, iguanas, and goldfish go for as high as $400. Just how many he sold last year, Anderson won't say. But he had stockpiled what he thought was a three-year supply of the figures before the fair, and still sold out by 3 p.m. on Saturday.

"I think people like them because they are [representations of] nature—very peaceful items," Anderson says. He creates new designs to break the tedium of continuously reproducing the same image. He promises to bring all new designs this year.

After such a successful 1996, Anderson expects to see a lot of artists with garden pieces this year. "Not that they're copying me," he says. "They just see what sells." He expects his own sales to be strong again, although not quite as strong as last year. "I think I have one more year left."

Thanks also to the many thousands of people who attend the fair and support the artists, and even the artists themselves. Many attendees and artists travel far distances to be a part of this event and we are pleased to welcome them to our community.

The National Association of Independent Artists, representing hundreds of exhibiting artists, has selected the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair as the number one arts festival in the nation. The Ann Arbor Street Art Fair is also ranked highly by Sunshine Artist magazine and the Harris List. The Street Art Fair is the original juried fair on S. University, E. University, and Church Street. The 1998 Ann Arbor Street Art Fair will take place July 15-18. The artist application deadline is February 15, 1998.

Ann Arbor Street Art Fair

Banister Pope, Pastels

The country's number one art festival

Place: The Street Art Fair takes place on South University from Washtenaw to Tappan and on East University between Willard and the U-M campus, with a small section on Church Street.

Hours: Fair hours are Wed.-Fri. 9 a.m.-9 p.m., Sat. 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Facts and figures: The nonprofit Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, Inc., is governed by a twenty-two-member board of directors that includes South University merchants and Ann Arbor artists and townspeople. The Street Art Fair is the smallest of the three simultaneous fairs and the most selective. Exhibitors have either been invited back from last year's fair or chosen from a pool of over 2,000 applicants. Sixty-eight of the 190 artists are new to the fair this year. An additional fourteen from the Ann Arbor Potters Guild and ten from the U-M art school won places through separate jurying processes. For information about exhibitors or about the 1998 fair, July 15-18, write to the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, Box 1352, Ann Arbor, MI 48106, or call (313) 994-5260.

Comments: Established in 1960, this is the original Ann Arbor art fair, the one that helped to spark the nationwide art fair movement. It remains the most prestigious—and frequently the most expensive—of the three Ann Arbor fairs, thanks to an exhaustive jurying process in which each medium is reviewed separately by specialists. Based on last year's fair, the National Association of Independent Artists recently named the Street Art Fair the country's number one art festival.

Prizes and purchase awards: On the first day of the fair, Wednesday, July 16, two outside jurors will give out ten $300 cash awards to exhibits of exceptionally high quality and originality. Look for the blue ribbons in the artists' booths on Thursday.

Information booth: Can't find your favorite Street Art Fair artist? Ask the volunteers at the information booth at the corner of South University and East University. Posters, T-shirts, and enameled pins are on sale at two merchandise booths, one located across the street from the information booth, the other on the corner of South University and Church Street.

A Red Cross trailer and emergency radio headquarters are set up just west of the South University-East University intersection. Volunteers from the Ann Arbor Emergency Radio Team patrol the fair, helping to find lost children and relaying information to fair organizers on everything from crowd problems to weather forecasts. The Red Cross offers water and emergency first aid, including ice packs for heat stress.

Live music and entertainment are featured at two locations: boogie-woogie pianist Mark "Mr. B" Braun will perform on the street off and on throughout the fair at the intersection of South University and East University, and a variety of artists will perform on Church Street just north of South University. For details, see Art Fair Entertainment, p. 51.

Children's activities: The Street Art Fair's children's activity booth, on Church Street just south of South University, offers youngsters a chance to try their own hands at artistic expression. Open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day, the booth is run by the Michigan Art Education Association. There is no fee, but donations are welcome and will be applied toward art scholarships.

Live Broadcasts: WQKL (107.1 FM) will broadcast live from a booth in front of Ulrich's Bookstore on the corner of South University and East University daily from 6 a.m. until fair closing.

Demonstrations: Since its inception, the Street Art Fair has had a strong commitment to education. Demonstrating artists' booths are marked with blue flags that indicate the times they will be demonstrating each day. Their names are flagged with [D] in the list of exhibitors that follows.

State Street Area Art Fair

Stephen Walker, Metal

A top fair turns 30

Place: "Area" is the key word in this fair's name. Almost all of the artists in the State Street Area Art Fair set up on Maynard, East Liberty, William, and North University. The booths on State Street south of William are actually the campus section of the Summer Art Fair.

Hours: Fair hours are Wed.-Fri. 9 a.m.-9 p.m., Sat. 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Facts and figures: This year marks the thirtieth State Street Area Art Fair. The fair was founded in 1968 by the State Street Area Association, a business group that promotes the north-of-campus shopping district. This year's fair features the work of 270 artists, with an additional thirty exhibiting their work at the Ann Arbor Fiber Arts Guild booth through a separate jurying process. More than eighty artists are new this year; they were chosen from over 1,300 applicants. For information on the 1998 fair, July 15-18, or for artists' addresses and phone numbers, write to the State Street Area Art Fair, Box 4128, Ann Arbor, MI 48106, or call (313) 663-6511.

Comments: The State Street Area Art Fair has been aggressively juried for most of its thirty years. The work exhibited here now rivals the original Street Art Fair on South University in both quality and price. In 1996, Sunshine Artist magazine ranked this fair as one of the top five fine arts and crafts sales venues in the country.

Prizes and purchase awards: This fair awards two $600 Best of Show cash awards (one for 2-D works and one for 3-D) and eight $150 honorable mention prizes. The names of the prizewinners will be posted at the main information booth on State Street and East Liberty on Thursday. In addition, several State Street Area Association members have committed themselves to "purchase awards," pledging to buy artworks costing $150 or more from the fair artists of their choice.

Information booths: Volunteers at three locations answer questions and sell postcards, caps, T-shirts, and posters (including an elegant commemorative poster celebrating the fair's thirtieth year). This fair's information booths are at State and East Liberty, at Liberty and Division, and at William and State. At Michigan Live in front of Liberty Plaza, fairgoers can send free electronic "Art Fair postcards" to anyone with Internet access.

Live music and entertainment, supported by grants from the Washtenaw Council for the Arts, are featured at four locations. Stages are at Liberty Plaza, on the corner of East Liberty and South Division (sponsored by WQB); on State near East Liberty; at the intersection of State and North University; and at the north end of Thompson near the city's Maynard Street parking structure. For a schedule of performances, see Art Fair Entertainment, p. 51.

The Children's Fire Safety Area, at Liberty and Division, across from the First Aid Station, features a variety of interactive displays designed to teach kids about fire safety. The exhibit, sponsored by the Ann Arbor Fire Department, is open the same hours as the fair, and admission is free. Look for "Fire Safety Sammy," the big red bus.

The food booth across Liberty Street from Liberty Plaza serves cheese steak hoagies, hot dogs, sausages, and beverages. Sponsored by the State Street Area Association, the booth has the same hours as the fair.

The Michigan Theater on East Liberty sponsors its annual beer garden featuring cold beer, bratwurst, snacks, and air-conditioning for weary fairgoers. Hours are Wed.-Fri. 11 a.m.-9 p.m., Sat. 11 a.m.-5 p.m. The theater sells movie posters, T-shirts, and other film memorabilia at a booth outside the theater, and presents art and foreign films and live performances in the evenings (see Art Fair Entertainment, p. 51).

Live broadcasts: WQB (102.9 FM) broadcasts from the Liberty Plaza Stage at Liberty and Division each day of the fair starting at 10 a.m. WQRS (105.1 FM) broadcasts from a booth in front of the Michigan Theater Wed.-Fri. 10 a.m.-6 p.m.

The Herb David Guitar Studio (East Liberty at Fifth Avenue) presents its popular porch performances again this year at various times throughout the fair.

Nonprofit organization booths are located on East Liberty between Fifth Avenue and Division. Representatives from seventy-four local organizations pass out literature and talk eagerly on everything from AIDS to preserving the rain forest.

ANN ARBOR SUMMER ART FAIR

27TH ANNUAL CELEBRATION OF ART

The Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair, organized by the Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans, is ranked by Sunshine Artist Magazine as one of the top three art fairs in the nation. The Michigan Guild continues the centuries-old tradition of artisan guilds by providing a sharing of resources, information, and educational experiences to its 1400+ members across the nation. Guild members contribute to the overall benefit of the cultural community by volunteering their time, energy, ideas, and talents throughout the year. While the Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair focuses on the celebration of visual arts, the festivities are enhanced by selected performing artists, the best of local blues and jazz musicians on the MainStage, and educational, fun, free art activities at the Imagination Station. We appreciate the support and guidance provided by the City of Ann Arbor and the Main Street Area Association. We thank the many volunteers and contributors who give their time to make this festival a success.

Summer Art Fair

Michael Kifer, Clay

Immense, eclectic, and economical

Place: The Summer Art Fair is the only fair with two separate locations. The campus branch is on State Street from South University to William. The downtown section is on Main Street from Huron to William, and on Liberty from Ashley to Fifth Avenue.

Hours: Fair hours are Wed.-Fri. 9 a.m.-9 p.m., Sat. 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Facts and figures: The youngest and largest of the three simultaneous Ann Arbor art fairs, the Summer Art Fair is descended from a "free fair" organized along the U-M Diag in 1970. The Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans evolved to manage the fair, adding a second location downtown and gradually upgrading the quality. This year, 557 artists will exhibit in the Summer Art Fair—324 on State Street, and 233 downtown. New to the fair this year is the Michigan Guild Grant Fund Booth at Liberty and Main. Donated artwork is for sale. All proceeds go to support visual arts in Ann Arbor.

Comments: As the only Ann Arbor fair controlled by the artists themselves, the Summer Art Fair doesn't jury out exhibitors just to bring in flashier new work; a few artists have returned every year since the fair's founding. While there's less high art here than at the other fairs, a wide range of handmade fine art and contemporary crafts at a wide range of prices makes this the most diverse and affordable of the three fairs.

Information booths: Guild booths on State Street in front of Angell Hall and on Main Street at Liberty offer friendly assistance of all kinds. Caps, T-shirts, posters, ponchos, and canvas bags are on sale at four souvenir booths: at the corner of Main and Liberty, on William at Main, and one at each end of the State Street segment of the fair.

Live music and entertainment are featured at two performance areas: the amplified MainStage near the intersection of Main and William, and a performance area at the intersection of Liberty and Main. For details of the performance schedules, see Art Fair Entertainment, p. 51.

Main Street Food Fair: Local restaurants sell food and drinks at this food court on West Liberty between Main and Ashley. Opens at 10 a.m. each day of the fair. Covered seating. See Food at the Fair, p. 70.

The Michigan Union Food Court: Twenty-one outdoor vendors sell ethnic food and American favorites between the Michigan Union and the LS&A Building starting at 10:30 a.m. each day of the fair. See Food at the Fair, p. 70.

The Michigan Union offers large, cool, comfortable rest areas for tired fairgoers. It's open Wed. & Thurs. 7 a.m.-midnight, Fri. & Sat. 7 a.m.-1 a.m.

The air-conditioned U-M Museum of Art at the corner of State and North University is open during Art Fair hours and admission is free (donations are welcome). During the fair, the museum's special exhibitions include Through the Looking Glass: Sculptures by Fred Sandback, The Museum Collects: 20th Century Works on Paper II, and Faculty Artists Exhibition. Discounted cards, books, toys, and handicrafts are on sale in the museum gift shop.

Children's activities: The Imagination Station, a popular family arts activity area, is located at Post Office Plaza, on East Liberty at Fifth Avenue. From 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wed.-Fri., and 10 a.m.-5 p.m. on Sat., children of all ages can try their hands at such supervised art projects as making sun visors, jewelry, and mosaics while musicians, dancers, and jugglers perform.

Nonprofit organization booths are located on East Liberty between Fifth Avenue and Division. Representatives from seventy-four local organizations pass out literature and talk eagerly on everything from AIDS to preserving the rain forest.

The Main Street Area Association provides souvenirs and information about downtown Ann Arbor at its booth at Liberty and Main.

Live broadcasts: WEMU (89.1 FM) broadcasts live from the MainStage on Main across from the Edison Center Wed.-Fri. noon-9 p.m., Sat. 11 a.m.-5 p.m. WWJ (950 AM) broadcasts live from the northeast corner of Main and William during fair hours. Tune in for periodic traffic and parking reports. WUOM (91.7 FM) has an information table set up in front of the LS&A Building on State Street during fair hours.

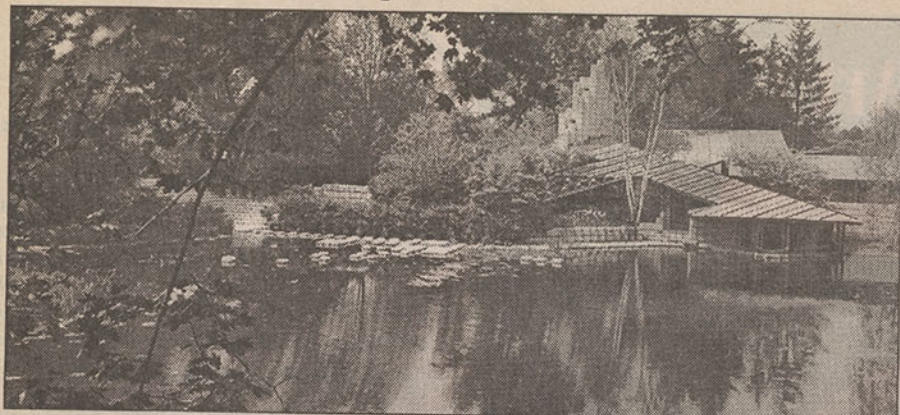

Community Television Network (cable channels 8, 9, 10, & 11): Anyone can be on television! Just stop by the CTN booths at the corner of Fifth Avenue and East Liberty during fair hours. Mini-interviews with happy fairgoers will be broadcast locally on channel 10 for weeks after the fairs.

Demonstrations: A few artists in the Downtown section of the fair offer demonstrations; their booth numbers are followed by [D] in the Downtown list. In addition, the Guild is organizing a Demonstration Area for the first time. Selected Guild members who otherwise wouldn't be participating in the fair will give scheduled demonstrations of their work under a tent on Liberty, near the corner of Main (next to Selo/Shevel Gallery). Artists will be present throughout the fair to discuss and sell their work at a shared space adjacent to the demonstration area.

Selling all natural and organic foods is truly an art form.

These days, even the regular old grocery stores sell a few natural and organic foods. That's not hard. But at Whole Foods Market, we've made the natural and organic foods business into an art form.

We've built an entire supermarket full of good-for-you foods. Unlike most stores, we work directly with small growers and "food artisans" to find the best foods available. Everything matters: taste, aroma, texture, color, and most importantly purity. We ship directly from the farm with the concern of an artist. We stock with the attention of a fanatic. And our chefs use their culinary artistry to create wondrously flavorful dishes.

The result: a palette full of colorful, healthful foods that will dazzle your eye and delight your senses.

FOOD AT THE FAIR

Paint your palate

Places to eat, from Argiero's to Zanzibar

How many art galleries do you know of where a child can walk around with a dripping ice cream cone?

When was the last time you admired a painting, pontificating about its use of contrasting textures to create a sense of discord, while at the same time sucking pizza grease off your fingers?

Well, in mid-July in Ann Arbor—when “eat” is the only three-letter word that competes with “art”—it could happen to you. While your eyes feast on the vast visual variety, don't forget about your tongue. During the Art Fair, local restaurants go all out to provide that fickle muscle in your mouth with everything it could possibly desire.

The following restaurants and temporary food courts are all located within four blocks of the fair. Restaurants are arranged in alphabetical order by neighborhood, with each restaurant's name followed by coordinates referring to its location on the accompanying map on p. 70. For instance, D2 means that Argiero's can be found at the intersection of column D and row 2.

Prices for a meal for one, excluding beverage, tax, and tip:

$ (under $6) $$$ ($12–$20)

$$ ($6–$12) $$$$ (over $20)

* = Alcohol is served

Because Sometimes the Best Way to Enjoy the Art Fair Is to Get Away From It

The booths, the crowds, the heat... sure, it's fun. But when you're hungry and ready to relax, the last thing you want is to wait 45 minutes for a seat. Reserve your table for a leisurely dinner at Cousins. Just ten minutes away from the crowds, you can enjoy appetizers like Venison Pâté and House Smoked Salmon. Entrees like Brace of Quail with Dried Cherry Sauce and Roasted Veal Chops with Shiitake Mushrooms. And desserts like our house-made ice creams, fresh fruit tarts, and Triple Chocolate Decadence. A delightfully different menu every other week.

We do it on a grill!

You haven't really done lunch—or dinner—until you've done it on a grill at the new BD's Mongolian Barbeque. Savor your personally selected concoction prepared by a chef before your eyes. Then have a feast!

- Create your own stir fry
- Enjoy all you can conquer!
- Do it with ale, wine or spirits
- Have fun!!

Have You Had A Great Harvest Experience?

It's a free, warm slice of bread in your hands with lots of butter and honey. It's the aroma of freshly baked breads, cookies, muffins and scones. It's the sound of laughter from a giant kneading table surrounded by friendly bakers. It's a cutting board overflowing with healthy, fiber-rich, all-natural breads that everyone in the family loves. But most of all, it's a whole lot of wholesome fun.

ARTISTS' STUDIOS

Studio Names

Many artists sell under a studio name as well as a personal name. If you know only the studio name, you can look the artist up here, then find the fair and booth number in the Artist Index beginning on p. 86. (This list does not include studio names based on an artist's surname.)

Let Our Family Care For Your Family.

"It's a family place. The care associates at Fairfax Manor hug 'em and make 'em feel loved."
-Hazel Ferguson, wife

Music brings laughter and togetherness to our residents, the family members and staff.

Chris Gardner credits the devoted staff at Fairfax Manor "for regaining a quality of life I thought I'd lost forever. I finally found people who really care about my Jack and me."

"It's good to hear my mother singing and laughing again."
-Joseph Moffatt
